PRIVATE EXPERIENCE / ENGLISH

Laguna Chaxa · Birds & Salt

An observational visit to the Atacama Salt Flat, focusing on birdlife and the salt-crusted landscape. Walking along the designated circuit allows ample time to pause and understand the relationship between water, food, and life in this environment.

Your itinerary

Approaching the salt flat

The transfer from San Pedro offers a chance to observe the transition from oasis to salt crust. Upon arrival, we will review the visitor guidelines and the accessible routes.

Observation trail

We walk along designated paths to compare the salt formations with the water areas. Your guide will explain why this wetland serves as a hub for life within the desert.

Birds and photography

We look for the birds present at the time-including flamingos, conditions permitting. While various species are documented in the area, their presence fluctuates; we cannot guarantee sightings of every species, nor is it permitted to leave the trail to get closer.

Pause and return

The time spent observing the surroundings varies depending on the group and lighting conditions. We then return to the vehicle for the trip back to San Pedro. Please note that this is not a swimming excursion, nor does it include a visit to the high-altitude lagoons.
