PRIVATE EXPERIENCE / ENGLISH

Llullaillaco

A mountain expedition involving movement between camps, with the summit goal contingent upon the group's capabilities and prevailing conditions. The historical three-stage outline serves as a starting point for discussion, not as a guarantee that it can be completed in three days.

Your itinerary

Approach to the first base/camp.

We organize transport, water, and food for a remote environment. Upon arrival at the first camp, equipment will be checked, and the group's adaptation to altitude will be assessed.

Moving between camps.

The next stage involves gaining altitude to reach the next planned base. Loads, rest periods, and rations are managed to conserve energy; additional time for acclimatization may be required.

Summit attempt.

The ascent begins within an agreed-upon weather window. The guide evaluates weather conditions, terrain, and the group's physical state, with clear criteria for turning back established before departure.

Descent and evacuation from the camp.

We pack up our gear and return to the vehicle, following the established logistics. We maintain respect for heritage sites: restricted areas are not entered, and no objects are collected.

DURATION

Duration depends on the pace of progress.

DISTANCE / ROUTE

Distances and elevation gains remain to be verified.

EFFORT

Demanding expedition.

MEALS

All meals and water supplies must be detailed by stage in the proposal; confirm arrangements for the transport of gear and equipment.

TRANSPORT

Hotel pickup and drop-off in San Pedro (depending on location). Private transfers with stops coordinated by the guide.

PREPARATION

Requires prior experience, acclimatization, and a comprehensive technical plan. Historical data regarding altitudes and timings need to be reviewed.