Licancabur · Expedition

A two-stage ascent, approaching via Bolivia with an overnight stay near Laguna Verde. International logistics and the demands of the summit day are discussed and prepared together before the trip is confirmed.

Your itinerary

First stage: border crossing and lagoon.

The transfer proceeds through official checkpoints toward the Laguna Verde area. Documentation and border procedures are verified prior to departure. An acclimatization hike allows for familiarization with the environment without unnecessary physical exertion.

The night before.

We settle into the reserved accommodation, share a meal, and prepare our gear, water, and rations. Resting and assessing the group are essential parts of preparing for the ascent.

Second stage: the ascent.

We depart early, following the route established with the guide. The itinerary anticipates a day of approximately twelve hours for the ascent and descent; decisions will be made based on the group's acclimatization, time, and weather conditions.

Descent and return.

We return to our base point and continue with the planned transfer. The return to Chile is subject to border operating hours; the itinerary should specify the conclusion of each stage.
