PRIVATE EXPERIENCE / ENGLISH

Ojos Del Salado

An expedition proposal that begins with specific planning. As there is no pre-set itinerary, this document outlines the process and scope that must be agreed upon prior to an ascent.

Your itinerary

Assessment and program

We review your experience, available dates, and current acclimatization status. We then develop a program that includes approach days, support, the ascent, and the return, while identifying the necessary access points and permits.

Progressing at altitude

Initial days allow for the assessment of physical adaptation before moving higher. Campsites and rest periods are determined based on the chosen route and the level of support arranged, without assuming a sequence not explicitly documented.

Ascent window

Any attempt depends on current conditions and the group's physical state. The program must include contingency plans and clear criteria for when to turn back. Booking an expedition does not guarantee reaching a summit.

Return

The itinerary includes the descent, pick-up, and a buffer of extra time. The starting and ending points for the service, as well as details regarding transfers and meals, are outlined in the specific proposal.

DURATION

DISTANCE / ROUTE

Route and metrics to be defined

EFFORT

Advanced high-altitude mountaineering

MEALS

A comprehensive plan-covering meals, water, support, and equipment-must be defined before final confirmation.

TRANSPORT

Start and end points, transfers, and support services are established within the expedition proposal.

PREPARATION

This document does not replace the technical program. Details such as distances, specific campsites, or timeframes-which are not documented by the source-are not provided here.
